Festival Overview

Tuku 22 Whakatū Heritage Months was a festival of culture that celebrated Nelson's unique stories, people and places. This year due to the impending Omicron outbreak of COVID 19 a decision was taken to "space out" the festival allowing hosts to have postponement flexibility and more planning time. This meant the festival ran not just in the usual month of April but also in May and June. This extended timeframe hugely increased participation.

Under the festival's tried and tested format, Council's role has been supporting individuals and groups to develop and coordinate their own events. These "Event Hosts" are supported with a contestable Tuku 22 grant fund and with significant marketing and promotion, both funded by Council.

Running for the month of April, May and June Tuku 22 hosted an unprecedented 96 events, including tours, workshops, talks, open days, performances and community celebrations. The programme covered cultural, natural and social history and art in the form of poetry, music, theatre, craft and digital art experiences. Attendee numbers at events are estimated at 14,796 people with a further 5,551 people estimated to attend displays and exhibits that were also part of the programme.

Vision and Community Outcomes

Council has supported Tuku 22 Whakatū Heritage Months because it contributes to realising the vision in the Long Term Plan 2021 - 2031. It promotes Nelson's heritage and has social, cultural, and economic benefits for our community.

Community Outcomes

Tuku 22 Whakatū Heritage Months contributed to achieving several of the community outcomes in Council's Long-Term Plan:

- Our communities have opportunities to celebrate and explore their heritage, identity and creativity.
- Our communities have access to a range of social, educational, and recreational facilities and activities.
- Our Council provides leadership and fosters partnerships, a regional perspective and community engagement.
- Our region is supported by an innovative and sustainable economy.

Regional Identity

Tuku 22 Whakatū Heritage Months recognises the eight mana whenua iwi of Te Taihō and their identity as kaitiaki of the region.

Tuku 22 Whakatū Heritage Months also uses one of the five identity pillars that define the region as set out in the nelsontasman.nz Regional Identity Inspiration Guide:

- Art & Artisans – there is an extraordinary depth of heritage, artists and artisan businesses here. Nelson is home to three of the oldest cultural institutions in New Zealand – the Suter Art Gallery, the Theatre Royal and the Nelson Centre for Musical Arts (Nelson School of Music).

Strategic Vision

Tuku 22 Whakatū Heritage Months provides “storytelling” delivery to align with and support the Taonga Tuku Iho Strategy that is currently in draft format for public consultation.

Feedback:

"A great effort all round and a conclusive demonstration that the community is capable of generating its own festival- with a bit of encouragement and support!"

"Tuku 22 has been a resounding success."

"E mihi ana ki ngā wāewāe tapu o Te Taihū, koutou mā ko Te Kaunihara o Whakatū me waku kaiāpāi, nei kā mihi. I feel very proud to have been given the opportunity to produce Toi Māori as part of Tuku 22, alongside an awesome team of friends. This was an awesome journey and I look forward to further future opportunities to showcase my work."

"Thank you very much for the professional & supportive manner in working with Tuku 22 team."

"Antarctic Heritage Trust was delighted to bring Hillary's Antarctic Hut Virtual Reality Experience to Tuku 22. The Nelson community was welcoming and hundreds of people came to 'explore' the historic hut through the immersive virtual experience. We met local Antarcticans who shared their stories on The Ice with us. It was lots of fun, thank you for having us!"

"Well done for bringing together such a diverse and full series of events for this year's Tuku 22."

"The Indonesian cultural experience was one of the best local events I have ever attended. It is so important that the festival is culturally inclusive. I think it showed other groups what 23 families can do, especially with the help of the embassy and Ministry of Culture and Heritage."

Everyone has a favourite event memory from Tuku 22. Here are a few from Tom Ransom, the Nelson City Council Arts and Heritage Adviser who coordinated the festival:

Sadly due to being struck with COVID 19, I was unable to attend the Ngati Kuia "Pakohe Trails" walk. I heard from others how excellent it was, with kaitiaki Lewis Smith sharing his mauranga around the use of this stone that is so special to this region and Māori. Having three iwi led events in the program was an important step forward for Tuku 22. For the fourth year running, the festivals percentage of events that represent non-European stories has grown. Looking forward to Tuku 23 I hope we see this diversity increase.

Nelson's incredibly vibrant Indonesian community created two very special events for Tuku 22. With a batik workshop, amazing food, dance and music, attendees senses were brought alive on a virtual "trip to Indonesia". My congratulations goes out to Mini Wati and her band of Indonesian families. You created a magical atmosphere, topped off with a room of us playing music together on fascinating bamboo "anglong" instruments.

Having the Antarctic Heritage Trust bring their "Sir Ed Hillary's Antarctic Hut" virtual reality experience was a definite headline event. Over 300 people "walked" into that hut in the snow from the Founders Heritage Park "portal". Such a low carbon way of experiencing that special heritage place.

Because of its extended duration, some Matariki events were part of the festival. This included the "small but beautiful" Nga Whetu O Matariki community park projections. These six light art shows featured a return of Nerys Ngaruhe's stunning whetu designs. Bringing the kaupapa to people in small neighbourhood parks where they could walk to the shows. This was I think, a subtle and respectful way of marking the season in a 100% local way.

Our Community News and Information

Volunteer at the Nelson Tasman Hospice

Nelson Tasman Hospice is a community organisation that provides vital services to those with life limiting illness and their families. Volunteers enhance the services that the hospice offers by giving the gift of their time, releasing staff to focus on their specialist roles.

Nicole Goldsworthy says that as a volunteer she not only learns new skills but enjoys “helping people in my community as well. It’s great way to put my free time to good use”.

Another hospice volunteer, Viv Markland, says, “I volunteer to give back to an organisation that gave great support to myself and my husband when he was unwell”.

The hospice’s Volunteer Programme Manager, Kriska Godak, explains that they are always in need of volunteers for current, and future open roles. “Many of our volunteer roles are defined by necessity, but you might have a skill that we didn’t know we needed until we met you”

If you would like to know more about volunteering with the team at Nelson Tasman Hospice please give Kriska a call on 03 546 3912 or email kriska.godak@nelsonhospice.org.nz

Three months of events celebrating Nelson’s heritage

This year Nelson City Council’s annual heritage month will run over three months to ensure that small COVID-resilient cultural events can be delivered for Nelson Whakatū.

Tuku 22 will take place over April, May and June, so that public events have more space between them, and have more time to be postponed if needed.

Community and Recreation Committee Chair Councillor Tim Skinner says adapting the event’s usual timing to make sure it could still go ahead this year is important for celebrating and supporting Nelson.

“The Tuku 22 Whakatahi heritage events create a space for telling the diverse stories that weave together to form Nelson’s past, and offer a deeper understanding of our city, our community, and our heritage,” he says.

“Tuku 2021 events had an estimated $495,000 of economic benefits to Nelson. We’re excited to be enabling small events for the community to enjoy, which will also help to revitalise our city in a difficult time.”

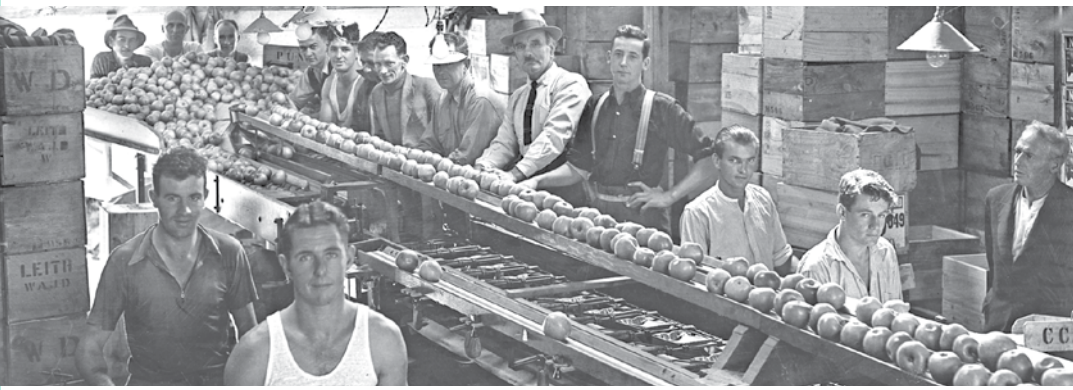

Events in the Tuku 22 calendar include:

- Cultural Conversations on Hardy Street is showing a series of filmed interviews with recent migrants exploring their struggles, joys and feelings about their new home.
- “Historicals” is performing a dramatic recreation of the region’s first aircraft flight and landing in Stoke just over 100 years ago.
- Community Art Works is celebrating the love of radio with a series of events running up to this year’s 90th anniversary of Nelson’s first radio station.
